

NOTICE: BOOK RELEASE AND EVENT

“Muslims of Europe: The ‘Other’ Europeans” by H.A. Hellyer will be released in October 2009, published by Edinburgh University Press (EUP). In it, Dr Hellyer examines a plethora of topics relating to the Muslim presence in Europe, looking at the effects on European multiculturalism, European Muslim history, and the internal discussions within Muslim communities on their roles as minorities from medieval times until the 21st century.

The book draws on H.A. Hellyer’s academic work at the University of Warwick (Fellow and then Senior Research Fellow) since 2001, as well as his policy work with the Brookings Institution [Ford Fellow] and as an independent academic engaged with the UK Home Office [one of the Deputy Convenors on the taskforce after 7/7] & the UK Foreign Office [ESRC Placement Fellow from Oct 07- Mar 08].

The Dialogue Society in London will be hosting an event on the 13th October to discuss the themes of the book, where it will also be available for sale ahead of the general release. The address is below – however, if you are unable to make it to the event, you can also order it through EUP or Amazon.com/Amazon.co.uk (full details below).

‘I can think of few books that are more timely and important. H. A. Hellyer’s Muslims of Europe: The ‘Other’ Europeans is must reading for scholars, students and policymakers.’
John L. Esposito, Georgetown University

‘While many today think we need to go beyond multiculturalism, Hellyer argues that the success of what he calls stage one multiculturalism means neither the end of common citizenship and national identity, nor their re-imposition, but rather their re-making.’
Tariq Modood, University of Bristol
